STRIKERS TRY FORCE.

Chicago Railroad Men Resort to Bullets and Blows.

An Agent Is Shot in the Leg from a Passing Train.

And Several Non-Union Men Are Assaulted on the Streets.

CHICAGO, March 1.—Railroad strikers and their sympathizing friends are getting dangerous. Monday night John Hayborn, an agent for the Chicago and Western Indiana, was sitting in a switch shanty at Forty-sixth street and Stewart avenue, he was shot in the leg by some one on a Fort Wayne train that was passing at the time.

About the same time William Crothers, agent for the same Company, was assaulted at Root street, and Stewart avenue by unknown persons and was badly hurt.

Jacob Sells and Benjamin Recorvery, two non-union switch tenders employed by the Western Indiana to take the place of strikers, were assaulted last night at Thirty-ninth street and the Western Indiana tracks while engaged in tending the switches at that point by two unknown men.

Sells and Recorvery applied to the police for protection and two officers were sent out to make an investigation. Neither of the assaulted men was badly injured, but no trace of their assailants could be found.
